The Easy to Use Text Editor for OneNote for the Perfect Collaboration Experience - MSDN Magazine OneNote's text editors are split into two types: the OneNote for Mac Editor and the OneNote for Windows Editor. Each of these editors has a number of features that you can customize to make sure that you work most effectively. For example, you can customize the way in which you can access the text you've entered by using either a keyboard or a mouse. You can also customize the navigation and keyboard shortcuts to make the most of OneNote. This article discusses the features of the OneNote for Windows Editor. This article discusses the features of the OneNote for Windows Editor. Accessing Text in OneNote There are two ways in which you can enter text into OneNote. You can either type the text by using the keyboard, or you can use the mouse to point to a text box and then click the text that you want to enter. In one of OneNote's newer text editors, the one used in the newer versions of Windows 10, this entry point is named the Word Art panel. The Word Art panel is located at the top of the editor. To navigate to this panel, open OneNote, and then press the F1 key. If you're using a mouse, click the gray arrow at the top right of the editor. If you're using a keyboard, hold down the CTRL key and press the F1 key. When you open the Word Art panel, you'll see two sets of icons. The first set represents the list of Notebooks that you have open in OneNote. You can click an icon to open the Notebook that you want. The second set of icons represents the text boxes that you have opened in the Notebook that you're currently viewing. You can click an icon to open the text box that you want. You can double-click an icon to open the Notebook or text box. You can also press the SHIFT key and click to open the Notebook or text box that's at the same level as the currently selected one. This makes it easy to open the Notebook or text box that's in the same folder. You can double-click an icon to open the Notebook or text box that you want. You can also press the SHIFT key and click to open the Notebook or text box that's at the same level as the currently selected one. 82157476af
